Featured Today in the New York Times, artist David Richardson's exhibition at the Ralls Collection

David Richardson has painted three important series of pictures in the last decade. Today, in an article featured in the New York Times, journalist Michael Gordon describes how Lt. Col. David Richardson compartmentalizes his two lives: one as a Marine in war zones, the other as an artist with a current gallery show in Washington. The exhibition has been extended through January 29, 2011

Update for the Ralls Collection 20th Anniversary and a Message from the Founder, President & CEO, Marsha Ralls

January 2011 marks the 20th Anniversary of the Ralls Collection and we hope you will join us in celebrating this milestone. Please save the date, March 18, 2011, when we will host our official celebration with a group exhibition at the Ralls Collection. What better way to acknowledge this important anniversary than to honor our artists who have enabled us to collect and enjoy their creative expressions that have enriched our lives for the past 2 decades. Whoever said all business is personal was right. This past year proved to be a business year that was intensely personal for me. It was a year of reflection and renewed strength of purpose.
